CATHOLIC DIOCESE OF CHARLESTON
OFFICE OF ARCHIVES AND RECORDS MANAGEMENT

Front cover:

Catholic High School, Columbia, South Carolina, circa 1959.

Founded in 1858 by Ursuline nuns, the Catholic High School was originally built as a school for girls. For approximately 70 years, the school operated as the Ursuline Convent and Academy and later Ursuline High School. In 1957, it was transferred to the Diocese of Charleston and renamed Catholic High School. Three years later the school was moved across Columbia and renamed Cardinal Newman High School.

The building was condemned and razed. St. Peter's School now stands on the site.

FOREWORD

by Bishop Robert Guglielmone

It is the policy of this diocese to identify, properly arrange, maintain, and safeguard records required to conduct its spiritual and temporal affairs. The publication of this handbook is intended to help school personnel satisfy that serious obligation. While it is not being promulgated as particular law, its provisions should be observed. Of course, the dictates of Canon Law as well as federal and state law always apply.

Signed,

Most Rev. Robert E. Guglielmone
Bishop of Charleston

INTRODUCTION

Purpose

---

Basic records management ensures that 1) administrators have better control of records relating to their day to day business, 2) the agency conforms to legal requirements, 3) time and money are not wasted on the retention of unnecessary or obsolete records, and 4) the records concerning the rights, privileges, and history of Catholics in the Diocese of Charleston are protected and preserved.

Records Management Defined

Records management is the systematic control of the recorded information necessary for an organization's operation. Its purpose is to assure that obsolete information is systematically destroyed and that valuable information is protected and maintained in a manner that facilitates its access and use. By eliminating unnecessary information and identifying information of enduring value, offices realize cost and space savings, experience an increase in efficiency, and ensure compliance with laws and regulations.

Obviously, not all records need to be maintained forever. Most have a relatively short "life span," or time period of value, and can be removed from an office on a regular basis. A records retention schedule identifies the life span for record series, which are groups of identical or related records that are normally used and filed as a unit. Records series are appraised to determine how long each must be maintained. The appraisal is based on four values:

Administrative value:

The usefulness of a record in the conduct of an organization's business. These include records that document policy and operations. Policy records are generally retained permanently, while operations records are usually considered short-term.

Legal/Canonical value:

The usefulness of a record complying with statutes and regulations of all civil and canonical jurisdictions. Records having legal value generally document legal or property rights of individuals or of the entity that created or maintained the records.

Fiscal value:

The usefulness of a record in documenting the financial transactions of a company or as evidence of a company's tax liability. Records having fiscal value usually relate to financial transactions and normally have short-term retention. Records documenting fiscal policy may have permanent value.

Historic value:

Records having historic or research value are retained permanently because they provide documentation of key functions, policies, activities, and events of the organization, and/or provide information on associated persons, subjects, and events.

Instructions for Using Records Retention Schedules

Records retention schedules provide guidelines for how long an office or agency should retain groups of related documents, known as record series. A general records retention schedule, like those included in this document, is comprehensive, including records that may potentially be in any or all offices of an organization. As a result, staff may find that they do not have some records listed in the general schedule. That is not a problem. The general schedule only sets the retention requirements of those records that already exist in an office. It does not require an office to create all the records listed.

The record retention schedules that follow include record series grouped by classification: Administrative, Education, Financial, Legal, Medical, Personnel, and Property. Relevant record series are listed under each classification. Each schedule contains four columns. The first column lists the title of the record series. The second includes a brief description of the records series, and occasionally elaborates retention. The third column defines the minimum time a records series should be retained. The last column states final disposition for the record series, or the final action to be taken.

If your office holds records that are not identified on a retention schedule, please contact the Office of Archives and Records Management.

Office staff should conduct records reviews regularly, usually on an annual basis. Referencing the appropriate record retention schedule, they can identify records ready for transfer (usually to school archives) or destruction. However, staff should secure the explicit approval of the school administrator before records are transferred or destroyed.

School Archives

The fundamental requirement for a school archive is that the records are in a secure location with environmental controls. This is commonly achieved with the use of locked, metal filing cabinet in a low-traffic office space. Ideally, however, the records would be housed in acid-free folders and containers in a secure, dark environment with circulating air at a steady relative humidity of about 35% and a steady temperature of about 65° F. It is understood that ability to achieve the ideal will vary from school to school.

ATTENTION

Records retention periods are subject to change. For the most current retention schedule, please consult the Office of Archives and Records Management.
